The Ministry of Time

E25-01
2024 | 352 pages

The Ministry of Time is a thriller and a love story and also a book which raises some interesting questions. Someone from a failed Arctic expedition who would have died in 1850 is brought to the present day, using a time machine. A civil servant has the job of helping him adapt. The book is more about how refugees are expected to assimilate than a classic science fiction novel.

Chukwuebuka Ibeh
Blessings

E25-02
2024 | 240 pages

This is a deeply moving book that you will not forget in a hurry. It is a coming-of-age story of a gay man in Nigeria, where homosexuality was made illegal by a law passed during the story. It shows the pain of being excluded from society simply because of who you are and how that leads to shame and even to joining in with terrible behaviour in an effort to conform.

Michael Cunningham
Day

E25-03
2024 | 273 pages

The Day by Michael Cunningham examines love and loss, along with the struggles and limitations, in family life. It tells the story of Dan and Isabel, husband and wife, who are slowly drifting apart, and their family. As the world goes into lockdown because of Covid, the family has to face reality and learn to live together and apart.

Percival Everett
James

E25-04
2024 | 320 pages

Jim is a runaway slave who speaks through a "slave filter", presenting a simpleton version of himself to keep safe from white people's aggression. As James, he is an intelligent, literate Black man who articulates his discerning opinions in erudite English. It is no easy matter to maintain this balancing act, especially when a white boy named Huck joins him on his great escape. A thought-provoking, sometimes humorous story of adventures with unexpected outcomes.

V.V. Ganeshanathan
Brotherless Night

E25-05
2023 | 341 pages

This gripping novel follows Sashi, a young woman aspiring to be a doctor amidst the Sri Lankan civil war in the 1980s. As violence escalates, she battles to save her family and confronts moral dilemmas while working with the Tamil Tigers and documenting human rights violations.

Robert Harris
Precipice

E25-06
2024 | 455 pages

In summer 1914, British Prime Minister Herbert Asquith leads his country into war with Germany. Meanwhile, an intelligence officer from Scotland Yard assigned to investigate a leak of top-secret documents uncovers a love affair between the Prime Minister and Venetia Stanley, who is more than 30 years younger. This affair then becomes a matter of national security.

Rebecca F. Kuang
Yellowface

E25-07
2023 | 344 pages

Yellowface is a satire about the complexities of cultural appropriation, diversity and the publishing industry. When June Hayward steals a manuscript from her deceased friend, she has to deal with the consequences of her actions in a world obsessed with identity and social media.

Doris Lessing
The Grass is Singing

E25-08
1950 | 263 pages

This novel, set in 1940s Southern Rhodesia, explores themes of race, oppression and societal norms through the tragic story of Mary Turner, a white farmer's wife, and her complex relationship with her houseboy, Moses. A gripping and thought-provoking read.

Paul Murray
The Bee Sting

E25-09
2023 | 643 pages

Using various different voices, Murray describes the lives of Dickie and Imelda Barnes and their children, Cass and PJ. They live in a town in the Irish Midlands, where everyone knows each other's business. With Dickie's car dealership going down the drain, their lives are unravelling. Battling with ghosts from the past, they all hide their true feelings from others and from themselves. But won't the truth eventually catch up?

Benjamin Myers
Cuddy

E25-10
2023 | 438 pages

St. Cuthbert, affectionately known as Cuddy, was revered throughout Northern England for his gentle affinity with animals and ordinary people. In four distinct parts dating from 687 to modern times, Myers explores the mystical influence of Cuddy across time and place, as well as themes of class, status and human connections. Rich use of language in various literary styles, including poetry, screenplay and extended monologue, further enliven this engaging work of historical fiction.

David Nicholls
You Are Here

E25-11
2024 | 349 pages

Marnie, a self-employed copywriter working from home, feels isolated because her friends have moved out of London. She and the nearly divorced teacher Michael are then invited on a hiking trip by their mutual friend Cleo. At first, Marnie is attracted by good-looking Conrad, but during the trip she and Michael get to know each other better in a series of witty conversations and against the background of challenging weather conditions.

Sally Rooney
Intermezzo

E25-12
2024 | 441 pages

Two brothers, Peter and Ivan Koubek, struggle with how to continue their lives after the death of their father. Peter, a successful lawyer in his thirties, is involved with two women at the same time: Sylvia, his first love, and Naomi, a much younger college student. Ivan (22) is a professional chess player and begins a passionate affair with Margaret, a divorcee who is 15 years older.

Salman Rushdie
Victory City

E25-13
2004 | 374 pages

An ancient poem, describing the rise and fall of a great empire, tells how a girl, inspired by a goddess, is able to found a city, perform miracles and live for more than two hundred years. Shortly before her death she composes the poem, which is found four hundred years after the mythical empire disappeared. Another great tale from the master of mythical storytelling.

Elif Shafak
There are Rivers in the Sky

E25-14
2024 | 496 pages

A fascinating literary treat, with multiple interwoven stories taking place alongside the River Thames in London and the Tigris, and with settings varying from ancient Mesopotamia to modern Turkey, and both modern and Victorian London. The book, which is beautifully and almost poetically written, is a challenging read, but well worth the effort.

Yael van der Wouden
The Safekeep

E25-15
2024 | 262

The Safekeep is the Dutch author Yael van der Wouden's debut novel. Shortlisted for the 2024 Booker Prize, the novel, set in the Netherlands in 1961, tells the story of Isabel, who lives alone in the family home. Meeting her brother's girlfriend Eva completely changes Isabel's world and reveals a secret that had been kept well hidden.

Ayòbámi Adébáyò
A Spell of Good Things

E24-01 | 2023
232 pages

This novel follows the lives of two young people in contemporary Nigeria. Eniolá, a boy struggling with poverty, and Wúròlólá, a young female doctor from a wealthy family. At the end, the two storylines come together in a devastating final chord. This is a gripping tale about survival in a broken country run by corrupt politicians.

Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie
Amerikanah

E23-01
2017 | 477 pages

A white person calls a neighbourhood multi-cultural when 9% of the residents are black. A black person doesn't call it multi-cultural unless 40% of the residents are black. Similarly, while white people think racism is no longer an issue, black people certainly think it still is. Ifemelu grows up in Nigeria but later goes to the United States to study. There, she discovers racism and starts to write a blog about this. Her friend Obinze, meanwhile, moves to London, where it is difficult for Nigerians to find well-paid work. Interwoven in this lively story with its well-described characters is a wonderful love story.

I really enjoyed reading this novel because it gave me a lot of insight in cultural differences and racism and also an impression of life in Lagos. I loved the colourful descriptions of the African sounds and smells and the contrast with the clean and over-organised life in the US.

Monica Ali
Love Marriage

E23-02
2022 | 499 pages

When Joe Sangster, a specialist in obstetrics and gynaecology, and Yasmin Ghorami, a junior doctor currently working on a dementia-friendly ward, decide to get married, it is time for their parents to meet. Yasmin worries that her father and mother, Shaokat and Anisah, who are from a Muslim Indian background, may find it difficult to get along with Joe's mother Harriet, a feminist strongly in favour of sexual freedom. As they get to know each other, it turns out that both families have deeply hidden secrets and that these are responsible for the sometimes strained relationships between the family members. The story is mainly told from Yasmin's perspective.

Monica Ali's engaging writing style pulls you in and it is interesting to watch Yasmin grow from being confused and sometimes unreasonable and judgemental into a woman who takes charge of her life. She is no longer afraid to make some difficult choices.

Jenn Ashworth
Ghosted

E22-01
2021 | 304 pages

One morning, Laurie's husband, Mark, just disappears. She doesn't tell anyone, not even Mark's mother who lives in Portugal. Finally, after five weeks, she calls the police, who find her behaviour rather suspicious. Laurie addresses the reader directly, seemingly taking us into us her confidence. We learn about her complicated relationship with her father, who suffers from dementia and accuses his late wife of having had numerous affairs, and with Olenka, his cleaner-cum-housekeeper. We also see how Laurie drinks too much and doesn't sleep well, having nightmares in which she is being accused of something very bad. And, together with Laurie, we also discover the secrets Mark kept from his wife. Gradually the events are revealed that caused the couple to drift apart. Ghosted is a moving story about love, sadness and anger, but also about new beginnings, told in a dark but humorous way.

Paul Auster
Baumgartner

E24-02 | 2023
208 pages

While recovering from a fall, philosophy professor Sy Baumgartner, widowed for a decade, reflects on his life with his wife Anna, reminiscing about his childhood and the 40 years he and Anna had shared. The novel is interspersed with Anna's early writings and Sy's childhood memories.

After a new romance fails and a young female scholar expresses an interest in Anna's work, Sy finally starts making plans for the future.

John Banville
April in Spain

E23-03
2021 | 356 pages

A young Irish woman, Phoebe Quirke, receives a phone call from her father. He is convinced that while on holiday in San Sebastian, he has caught a glimpse of Phoebe's best friend, April, long after she was presumed to have been murdered by her brother. After talking to April's Uncle Bill, who is a government minister, Phoebe decides to join her father in Spain, accompanied by Detective Inspector St John Strafford, to find out whether her friend is indeed still alive. At that same time, the hitman Terry Tice is urged to travel to San Sebastian to find April.

An Irish intrigue that comes to a conclusion in Spain. A precisely written, thrilling novel concerning the arrogance of power in Ireland in the 1950s.

Sebastian Barry
Old God's Time

E24-03 | 2023
272 pages

Set in mid-1990s Ireland, Old God's Time follows a recently retired police officer, Tom Kettle, who agrees to help when his ex-boss reopens a cold case involving two priests, both child sex abusers. The case brings back gruesome memories from Tom's own childhood. And he soon finds out that his current involvement isn't exactly what he had thought it would.

Marie Benedict
The Personal Librarian

E24-04 | 2021
338 pages

The Personal Librarian follows the story of Belle da Costa Greene, who becomes hugely successful in American society by purchasing rare manuscripts to build Mr J.P. Morgan's newly built Pierpont Morgan Library. But is Belle who she says she is? What secrets is she hiding?

T.C. Boyle
Talk to me

E22-02
2021 | 292 pages

Guy Schermerhorn is a professor of psychology involved in researching language acquisition in primates. Thanks to Guy's careful training, the chimp Sam has learned to communicate through sign language. Sam lives in Guy's apartment, but this is wreaking havoc on Guy's personal life. Guy is lucky to find the undergraduate student Aimee Villard, who volunteers to babysit. Aimee and Sam have an immediate connection, and before Guy knows it, she's moved in, proudly devoting herself to Sam's care and Guy's project. Dr Moncrieff, the head of the department, is not so optimistic about the project and decides that it has to stop. However, Aimee is not willing to give Sam up and so runs away with him. This book is about Aimee's love for Sam. How far will she go, while she is also hiding from Dr Moncrieff?

Jo Browning Wroe
A Terrible Kindness

E23-04
2022 | 380 pages

It is October 1966 when the novel starts. William Lavery, 19 years old and recently qualified as an embalmer, responds to a call for his services in a Welsh village struck by a terrible natural disaster. After attending to the bodies of numerous young children, he is struck by memories of his own childhood, dominated by conflicts between his mother and his father's family, and by his experiences in a strict boarding school for choristers. After his return from Wales, William joins his family's firm of undertakers and eventually marries his long-term girlfriend, Gloria. But despite building up a successful professional life and a good partnership with his wife, he remains haunted by his memories until, years later, he has a chance meeting with a boyhood friend and visits Wales with Gloria, finding the place totally changed.

A gripping debut novel about the struggle for a balanced life.

Hernan Diaz
Trust

E23-05
2022 | 416 pages

Trust shows the reader four versions of a story. Firstly, Bonds, presented as a novel by Harold Vanner, describes how Wall Street businessman Benjamin Rask manages to amass a huge fortune in spite of the financial crises in New York in the early twentieth century, while his wife Helen struggles with mental health issues in an institution in Switzerland. In the second manuscript, Andrew Bevel, on whom the character Benjamin Rask is based, is furious about how he and his wife Mildred are portrayed. So he hires Ida Partenza, a young aspiring author and daughter of an Italian anarchist, to write his autobiography. By then, Mildred has died and so Ida only hears Andrew's side of the story. Decades later, however, when Ida unexpectedly has access to Mildred's diaries, a surprising picture emerges.

We keep on reading because we want to learn 'the truth', but at the same time we are forced to think about how fiction works and to what extent a narrator can be trusted.

Jennifer Egan
The Candy House

E23-06
2022 | 334 pages

When Bix Bouton, the founder of tech company Mandala, finds himself short of ideas, he hears about experiments involving using brain sensors to upload an animal's perception. Within a few years he has developed a new technology, Own Your Unconscious, that enables people to access all their memories and share them with others. But not everyone is happy with this innovation. Anthropologist Miranda Kline, for example, is Bouton's biggest critic. Chris Salazar, CEO of non-profit organisation Mondrian, wants to escape all data-gathering. Other key characters include Alfred and Miles Hollander and Miranda's daughters, Lana and Melora. Their relations and friends come to life in a series of stories showing the consequences of the use of the internet and social media from different perspectives and at different times in the past and the future.

In beautiful and versatile prose Jennifer Egan sketches a tangible image of a range of characters in a world in which human relations are more and more controlled by tech companies.

Louise Erdrich
The Night Watchman

E23-07
2020 | 464 pages

As there were only a few good pieces of farmland on the reservation, most people had to live off jobs at the jewel-bearing plant in Turtle Mountain. One of the employees is 19-year-old Patrice (Pixie) Paranteau, who is very good at Indian beadwork and earns just enough to help her family to survive. After her sister Vera disappears, Pixie travels to Minneapolis to look for her. Her uncle Thomas Wazhashk, the tribe's leader, who works as a night watchman at the plant, is fighting against the government's termination policy. His character is based on the author's grandfather.

Many colourful characters are woven into this beautiful story with their longing for a decent life and love. This book truly draws you into Native American life.

Jonathan Franzen
Crossroads

E22-03
2021 | 580 pages

It is 1971 and almost Christmas in New Prospect, USA. Russ Hildebrandt is the second pastor of the First Reform Church. Marion, his wife, has a past that Russ does not know about. Both are struggling to prevent their marriage from collapsing. Their children, in turn, have problems of their own. Clem, the eldest son, is coming home from college, having taken a difficult decision. Becky, their daughter, is very popular, attractive and falling in love. Fifteen-year-old Perry is bright, but addicted and selling drugs to eighth-graders. Meanwhile, Judson, the youngest child, is loved by everyone. Events from the past and present come to a head on a single winter day, described from intertwined perspectives and with sustained suspense. Franzen's long-anticipated book about a "normal" American family offers a fascinating insight into their searching for identity and wrestling with morality. This first volume of a trilogy stands on its own, but may well leave you longing for the next.

Karen Joy Fowler
Booth

E24-05 | 2022
482 pages

All the men in the Booth family are Shakespearean actors, while their women take a back seat. Following their father's fame is not easy and all the sons are in keen competition, with varying success. But their brother John's assassination of Abraham Lincoln impacts on the entire family.

Melissa Fu
Peach Blossom Spring

E23-08
2022 | 385 pages

This well-written, gripping family saga tells the story of three generations, starting in China during the Second Sino-Japanese War. A mother and her son travel across China, fleeing from the atrocities of the war. On the way the mother tells him stories while showing a scroll on which fables are depicted. The journey ends in Taiwan. In the next part we follow the son to the United States, where he goes for graduate studies, marries and gets a daughter. The final part is about the daughter growing up in search of her identity: Chinese or American? She wants to know more about her father's past, but he is not able to tell her because his memories are too painful.

It was a great pleasure reading this book because the author manages to draw such a vivid picture that it feels as if you yourself are part of the story.

Claire Fuller
Unsettled Ground

E22-04
2021 | 289 pages

The 51-year-old twins Jeanie and Julius live with their mother in a small cottage. The three of them lead an isolated life, growing everything they need for sustenance in the garden and making music together inside the house. But when their mother, Dot, suddenly dies, the only way of life they've ever known comes tumbling down. How did Dot keep the family afloat financially? How will Jeanie and Julius adapt to their new world? Unsettled Ground author Claire Fuller has written a captivating novel giving an intriguing insight into poverty in present-day England.

Damon Galgut
The Promise

E22-05
2021 | 293 pages

The story is about a white South African family, living on a farm outside Pretoria. Mother Rachel on her deathbed, extracts the promise from her husband Manie that Salome, the family's black maid, will be given a house and a plot of land of her own. The youngest daughter, Amor, overhearing her mother's request, chooses her own way in life. When she meets up with her family at funeral gatherings, she reminds them of the promise. In the end she herself can fulfil the promise, but by then the political situation in South Africa has changed considerably and the promise has taken on a different dimension. As the story unfolds, the narrator takes the reader into the depths of the various characters' hearts. The novel contains beautiful metaphors that are a treat to the imagination. Damon Galgut won the Booker Prize 2021.

William Golding
Lord of the Flies

E24-06 | 1954
182 pages

This classic explores the descent into savagery of a group of British schoolboys stranded on a deserted island after a plane crash. Initially, they attempt to establish rules, but soon the group falls apart, resulting in power struggles and chaos. Even today this exciting story of leadership and the darker aspects of human nature provides food for thought.

Tess Gunty
The Rabbit Hutch

E24-07 | 2022
396 pages

'On a hot night in Apartment C4, Blandine Watkins exits her body.'

This is the opening to Gunty's moving and at times absurd debut, which describes the lives of Blandine and many other characters who in one way or another are tied up in the events leading up to this bizarre climax.

Abdulrazak Gurnah
Afterlives

E22-06
2020 | 275 pages

In a town on the Tanzanian coast, against the background of German colonial rule in East Africa (Deutsch-Ostafrika) in the late nineteenth to mid-twentieth century, Hamza, Afiya and Ilyas try to cope with everything life throws at them. After working as a servant for a German officer, Hamza returns to his home village, where he falls in love with Afiya. She was raised by an "uncle" and "aunt" who treated her badly and is finally offered the chance of a better life by her brother Ilyas, who ran away from home as a child before his sister was born. The man who connects them all is Khalifa, grumpy but full of good gossip as well. Gurnah, the winner of the 2021 Nobel Prize for Literature, has very successfully combined big world events such as colonialism and war with the small pleasures and setbacks in private lives.

Paul Harding
This Other Eden

E24-08 | 2023
221 pages

Inspired by historical facts, Harding describes in beautiful prose the lives of the eccentric residents of a small, isolated interracial community on Apple Island, considered by some mainlanders to be a 'pauper colony', in 1911. The results of an official inspection of the island have life-changing consequences for all its residents.

Barbara Kingsolver
Demon Copperhead

E24-09 | 2022
560 pages

Demon Copperhead won the 2023 Pulitzer Prize and the Women's Prize for Fiction. Although set in desperate poverty (in Virginia), this is a hopeful novel, with a cast of complex and likeable characters. It is written with humour and although it is a long book, it is easy to read.

Claire Keegan
Small Things Like These

E23-09
2021 | 116 pages

It is December 1985 in a small town in Ireland. Bill Furlong, a coal merchant and family man, is facing the busiest season of the year. Married to Eileen and having five daughters, he often struggles to make ends meet. But he is hopeful about the future of his daughters, who go to the town's only good school for girls, which is run by an order of nuns. One morning, when delivering an order at the convent, he discovers a girl in the coal shed who asks him for help. This prompts Bill to start thinking about his own life, the lives of his daughters and the life of the girl in the coal shed. Then he takes his final step

A beautifully written book about one man's thoughts, explained in a philosophical way and examining how we can take responsibility even if we have to go against the prevailing rules.

Victor Lavalle
Lone Women

E24-10 | 2023
304 pages

Adelaide Henry, a black woman with little more than a massive trunk to her name, sets out alone to escape her violent past. She heads to the forbidding badlands of rural Montana to homestead. But will the mysterious contents of the trunk finally allow her the peace and anonymity she craves?

Mary Lawson
A Town called Solace

E22-07
2021 | 288 pages

The story is set in the fictional town of Solace in Northern Ontario (Canada) in 1972. Three people are at the heart of the novel. Seven-year-old Clara, whose rebellious sister Rose has run away from home. Mrs Orchard, a widowed elderly neighbour, who asks Clara to feed the cat while she is in hospital. Liam, a recently divorced man in his late thirties who comes to live in Mrs Orchard's house. And there is Moses, Mrs Orchard's cat, unaware of how he connects the three characters. From three different points of view the story unfolds and tells the reader how the characters come to terms with the past and find possibilities for a new beginning. Mary Lawson tells a quiet, timeless story about people whose characters are drawn with great empathy. All storylines centre on loss, longing and love. The book was longlisted for the Booker Prize 2021.

Christy Lefteri
The Beekeeper of Aleppo

E22-08
2019 | 317 pages

Nuri tends his bees as they tend him. His organised bee colonies seem like paradise, just like the world of Nuri, his wife Afra and their son Sami. Then war destroys both paradises and Nuri and Afra are torn between staying in Syria, waiting for death, or trying to join his cousin Mustafa in England. They embark on a journey full of agony and anxiety, during which they meet many other refugees from very different backgrounds. A story of lost dreams, lots of suffering and anxiety against a background of enduring love between a husband and wife.

Martin MacInnes
In Ascension

E24-11 | 2023
512 pages

In Ascension was longlisted for the Booker Prize and winner of Blackwell's Book of the Year. It moves from growing up in Rotterdam to the depths of the ocean and on to outer space in a mixture of genres (science fiction, thriller and mystery) and written with a beautiful turn of phrase.

Emily St. John Mandel
Sea of Tranquility

E23-10
2022 | 255 pages

Three different characters in three different times (the 20th, 21st and 23rd centuries) have unusual experiences that leave them perplexed and change the course of the rest of their lives. In 1912, Edwin is sent to Canada following a family disagreement on colonial matters; in 2020, receptionist Mirella is confronted with impossible developments in a video performance, and in 2203 novelist Olive encounters a new contagious disease on her book tour. All three characters also encounter a mysterious stranger while hearing violin music and background noises reminiscent of a railway station. Finally, in 2401, Gasperry, born in the Lunar Colony in the Sea of Tranquility, goes to work for the Time Institute and finds himself conflicted between his duties for the institute and his compassion for the people he is supposed to observe.

An intriguing story, stretching your imagination and challenging you to balance the book's fantasy world with existing reality.

Ian McEwan
Lessons

E23-11
2022 | 448 pages

Roland Baines, born in 1948 whose life is described over a period of 70 years, seems a promising boy, but doesn't live up to this promise. Fate plays an important part in this. He doesn't finish school. After various odd jobs, during which he appears to be a gifted piano player, he marries British-German Alissa. But she leaves him and their seven-month-old son to pursue a career in writing. Roland raises his son single-handedly. Later on he meets his wife again in East Berlin, just before the fall of the Berlin Wall. Over a period of half a century Roland builds his own walls and crashes into others he doesn't want to crash into. Other historic events, such as the troubles in the Middle East in the 1950s, the Cuban missile crisis and the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, also figure in the background of this book.

Lessons describes the life of a baby-boomer who, in despair, watches his life go by. McEwan states that his novel is partly autobiographical.

Jon McGregor
Lean Fall Stand

E22-09
2021 | 288 pages

Robert "Doc" Wright is a General Technical Assistant, leading two young assistants on a geographical research expedition in Antarctica. During the trip, unnecessary risks are taken, and when a sudden storm strengthens and the radios fail, the three become isolated. The story continues with Doc's return home to the UK, seen through the eyes of his wife, Anna. Having been at opposite ends of the globe for 30 years, the two have become estranged. Anna has struggled to find a balance between raising their children and her career as a climate expert, and now suddenly has to take on a new role as Doc's full-time carer. An investigation into the Antarctic tragedy is launched and Doc, who suffers from aphasia following a stroke, has to find a way to account for his actions. McGregor has written an emotional novel about a relationship and communications after a stroke that is both captivating and deeply sad.

2019 | 384 pages

Where the Crawdads Sing follows the story of Kya, an abandoned girl living in the marshlands of North Carolina during the 1950s and 60s. Despite her isolated life and difficult upbringing, she is determined to make something of herself and finds solace in nature and her own creativity. When Chase Andrews, a local celebrity, is found dead in the marshes, Kya becomes the prime suspect. As the townspeople turn against her, Kya must find a way to fight for her innocence and prove her worth to society. Along the way, she discovers what it truly means to be alive and be loved.

This book takes you from the beginning to the end of a life so different and sometimes so surreal that it is hard to put it down and not read it in one go.

Young Robin is brilliant, but cannot cope with day-to-day life. He is diagnosed with an anxiety disorder and is scared to go to school. Doctors demand that he should take medication. The loss of his mother is running deep and drives him to extremes. His father's stories about his search for life on other planets as well as their joint trips into the wilderness calm him down. When he is offered a way into his mother's mind, he changes dramatically and is able to explore his original creativity. However, he does not expect good things to last. His father, the astrobiologist Theo Byrne, cannot change that as he himself is dealing with the dramatic consequences of his wife's death, which make him feel helpless and fill him with sorrow and guilt.

Imagine a story with many layers: the love of a man for his deceased wife, and his difficult, original son. This book will leave a deep impression.

The Watchmaker of Filigree Street

E23-14
2016 | 318 pages

Natasha Pulley's first novel is an intriguing, magical story set in the 19th century and containing elements of magic realism. When a bomb explodes at Scotland Yard, a mysterious gold pocket watch saves the life of Thaniel Steepleton, who works at the Whitehall telegraphy department in London. In his search for the watchmaker, Thaniel meets the eccentric Keito Mora, a lonely Japanese immigrant. Nothing in this book is as it seems. The various themes dance lightly through the story like the golden fireflies lighting up Mora's garden.

This story of friendship and love takes you from Japan to Victorian London, where everything comes together in an exciting finale. Read it and let yourself be led through this labyrinth of wonders.

The Whalebone Theatre

E24-13 | 2022
560 pages

This is a book of two stories; one of children growing up in Dorset and creating a theatre in a whale carcass, and the other of the same characters as young adults, acting as spies in France in the Second World War. The characters are interesting and the plot gripping, with beautiful and unusual imagery.

The Island of Missing Trees

E22-12
2021 | 320 pages

It is 1974 and the island of Cyprus and its capital Nicosia are divided into a Turkish and a Greek part. The situation is tense. And in these circumstances a Greek Christian boy and a Turkish, Muslim girl meet and fall in love. Romeo and Juliet revisited? It is an impossible situation, people watch each other all the time. But there is one place in Nicosia which is an oasis in this hostile environment. In The Happy Fig inn they find stolen moments of sanctuary, guarded by its owners and by the fig tree in the centre of the restaurant which has stood there for over 80 years. It is a place where they can share their dreams of a better world, until war breaks out, causing them to flee. Decades later, in London, their teenage daughter struggles to find out where she belongs. And gradually we learn what happened all those years ago. A story of infinite tenderness between lovers and towards their daughter.

The Fortnight in September

E22-13
1931 | 326 pages

Every year the suburban Stevens family goes to Bognor in West Sussex for their fortnight's holiday. This offers Mr Stevens, a chief invoice clerk disappointed at having been passed over for promotion, an opportunity to dream about a future in which something could happen to reward his striving in the past. Mrs Stevens dreads the train journey and does her utmost to hide her fear of the sea. Most of all she enjoys the quiet hour after supper when Ernie, their youngest, is in bed, and the others have gone out. Their seventeen-year-old son Dick tries to understand why he is unhappy in his job as a clerk and comes to an important decision about his future, while his sister Mary, who is nearly twenty, finds romance. This story, written in 1931, about hard-working people doing normal things draws you in and makes you wish there was a sequel showing how their plans and dreams worked out.

Great Circle

E22-14
2021 | 589 pages

After the baby twins Marian and Jamie Graves have been rescued from a burning ship, their Uncle Wallace, a painter who drinks too much and has no idea how to raise children, takes them in. Marian has always wanted to be a pilot, but when Barclay Macqueen, a shady businessman, makes her dream come true, she has to pay a very high price. Jamie leads a very different kind of life and becomes a well-known artist. In 1950, Marian disappears while flying around the world from north to south. At regular intervals, the story switches to Hadley Baxter, a disgraced Hollywood movie star, who, more than 50 years later, is preparing for her role as Marian in a movie about the latter's life. The novel is set against the background of Prohibition, the Great Depression and the Second World War and includes the histories of various real-life women pilots. This results in a very interesting read.

Should We Stay or Should We Go

E23-15
2021 | 288 pages

After 10 years of Alzheimer's Kate Wilkonson's father dies. The period prior to his death makes the Wilkinsons come to a decision. They know all about the cost of caring for "veggie patients". Now in their early fifties they decide they don't want their three children to have to live through possibly the same ordeal they experienced when caring for Kate's father. Together they decide to fix a date to take their own lives on their eightieth birthday. The reader is taken through various scenarios, with lots of failed attempts by the couple to commit suicide. Although the subject of this novel is often sad, the author also presents the reader with hilarious situations, ruthlessly describing the circumstances of the residents ('inmates') in a nursing home.

This story may remind readers of similar experiences in their own lives.

The Fraud

E24-14 | 2023
464 pages

In Victorian England, Mrs Touchet, the former novelist William Ainsworth's housekeeper, becomes intrigued by the trial of a local butcher who claims the inheritance of an estate. The only credible testimony for the impostor comes from a freed Jamaican slave. Smith's first historical novel contains multiple examples of fraud, but it is up to the reader to decide what is true.

The House of Doors

E24-15 | 2023
320 pages

This novel, set in British Malay in the early 20th century, is a tribute to Somerset Maugham, both in style and because he features in it as a guest of a British couple. It tells a series of intriguing stories about love, a murder trial and adultery.

Edmund de Waal
The Hare with Amber Eyes

E22-15
2011 | 351 pages

During a stay in Japan, Edmund de Waal, the author of the book, admires the netsuke (miniature ivory sculptures from Japan) of his great-uncle Ignace von Ephrussi, who lives in Tokyo. The inheritance of the 264 netsuke arouses Edmund's curiosity about the collection's origins. He discovers that they were bought by Edmund's great-grandfather, Charles Ephrussi, in Paris in the 1870s. The story of the netsuke is related to the history of the Ephrussi family, a Jewish family of wheat traders, originally from Odessa and who, over time, became bankers, with offices in all the major European capitals. Edmund's quest leads him through the Paris of Proust and Monet, and a time of growing anti-Semitism and the Dreyfus affair, right up to the present day. This book gives insight into the lives of a rich Jewish family around 1900 and beyond, at both a personal and broader level.
